PREFACE.

MAY-DAY, 1852, saw the first number of the ENGLISHWOMAN'S DOMESTIC MAGAZINE published, and the first volume was completed now four years since. That first volume was a speculation, and none could tell if it would prosper, or go the way of so many other publications. It succeeded, and the last four volumes of the Magazine bear evidence as to its increased prosperity in the greatly improved character of all its contents. Continued improvement we promise shall still be visible in the pages of the sixth volume, and we ask of all our subscribers (especially those who have had solid testimony of our liberality in the distribution of the annual prizes) to make the name of the ENGLISHWOMAN'S DOMESTIC MAGAZINE widely known amongst their friends and acquaintances.

Although the past twelve months have hardly been favourable to the sale of periodicals, in consequence of the heavy taxation necessitated by the late war with Russia, and also (as all our British housekeepers know) the exceedingly high price of all commodities, yet we have increased the number of our subscribers nearly ten thousand since the issue of our fourth volume last year.

We will now say a few words as to the future, and point out to our subscribers one or two questions which are engaging the public attention at this time, and most intimately concern the interests of English-women. The first of these is—the alteration of the Law of Divorce, and we intend to call in the aid of the ablest pens in England to describe the nature of this and all other laws affecting the fair sex. Another important subject is the education of girls, and on this we shall present to our readers some papers of a most interesting nature. Some articles will also appear on the employment of women in branches of manufacture suited to their strength and capabilities.

All the Tales and Sketches in the forthcoming volume of the Magazine will be original, and will be written by a staff of unexcelled authors. "The Doctor" being finished, we shall have more space for recipes and other household requirements, and we doubt not that we shall succeed in endeavouring to make our humble publication a small means of assistance and pleasure to the happy homes of our numerous subscribers.
